SNAPSHOTS AT THE FAIR GROUNDS

It is given over to art and mechanical drawing displays.

Some of the drawings, paintings and water color sketches seen in the art department are far above the ordinary. In fact, one local artist was heard to say that his own paintings would not look out of place among some of those shown at the fair.

One of the most interesting exhibits, however, in the university building is the archaeological display of ancient utensils, chosen from the list of 3,000 at the university.

The various potteries are taken from the Isthmus of Panama, the bone and horn implements from southern Utah, and the red ware from southern Arizona. The pottery includes various vessels holding water, food and cooking utensils, cooking pots, storage jars, ladles, pitchers, etc. On the walls of the booth are pictures of Utah's natural bridges and scenes taken from ancient cliff ruins.

This is the first fair association in the country to adopt the idea of not admitting any but tubercular tested cattle for exhibition. The directors of other fairs have discussed the matter, but lacked the initiative to put it into effect.

The action of the Utah state fair directors was the result of a conference with the state board of health and the local U. S. bureau of animal industry, the veterinarians urging upon the directors the necessity for taking such a step.

It is encouraging to note that of all the cattle entered, only two cows were shut out as being infected. One of these was a registered importation from the Isle of Jersey, valued at $250. She will, of course, have to be killed.

Dr. J. C. Huddleston of the Agricultural college is in town attending the state fair in the interest of his institution.

THE ROUND OF THE THEATERS

THEATER—The fair and conference traffic has hardly commenced yet at the various houses, but it will be here with a rush from tomorrow on. At the theater the advance sale for "The East West," one of the biggest attractions of the year, opened this morning, and Manager Pyper urges his city patrons to secure their seats early. * * *

OPRHEUM—The best offering the orpheum circuit has given so far this season is the "operatic festival" presented by Charles Lovenberg's 15 singers. In the first part of the baton of A. Zambellano, "Gipsy Life" and "The Carnival of Venice." The selections given by the singers are from the favorite operas and each number scored a distinct success. Set in a picture-like gipsy camp the entire company greeted the audience first with a pot-pourri of airs from the ever-lovely "Bohemian Girl." The chorus sang with perfect balance, delightful tone and a truly remarkable volume. The few vocalists. All the numbers were well received, to a favorite seemed in the "I'm Fortune Teller" selection, featuring Mrs. Peloton in "The Gipsy Sweetheart." Mme. Rosina's pure and ringing coloratura showing to excellent advantage with him. Miss Brunelle, aided by personal charm and graceful execution, was heard in a number of violin selections, displaying ability rarely heard on the vaudeville stage. The sextette from "Lucia" was an instant success. Mme. Rosina, Sig. Pettine and Sig. Peloton being brought to greatest advantage. The soprano of Pettine was a distinct feature of the sextette and the celo-like voice of Bellini again scoring. Beautifully stung, in a scene portraying a glimpse of the Grand canal of Venice by night, the "Last Rose of Summer" was effectively sung by Miss Siefer in her high dramatic soprano. Miss Siefer apparently is a trifl troubled by English, but this has no effect upon the beauty of her voice, for her number was received with great warmth and enthusiasm. In the same setting was sung the trio from "Trovatore." Miss Siefer was again heard in this number, with Pettine and Turel. Turel's baritone was robust and rich, while Pettine, though appearing in all numbers and having, perhaps, the most exacting roles, displayed his fine high tenor to as good effect as in his other numbers. The sextette, an ensemble, consisting of gems from the favorite old operas, the others being dressed in a manner suggestive of the picture-like characters in the compositions selected, was a treat in a choice work. The heartiness with which this number was greeted was shown in the demand for encores, the singers being compelled to respond four times to the thunderous ovation which called them back. This operatic festival is by far the most effective offering of the season so far.

Cavana combines the dexterity of a slick wire artist and the巧巧 of the contortionist in truly remarkable style. His acts offer several new and the old scenes. Miss Mario Fenton, the blonde in black, wins her way with a sweet voice, a collection of catchy operatic songs and a bewildering array of gowns, which were a delight to the feminine portion of her auditory. "The Police Inspector," the sketch of the evening, savors quite a little of the melodramatic and relies on the "third degree" for its plot. The parts are in capable hands, Mr. Turner and Mr. Doyle having rather difficult roles while the youth woman of Mr. Wilson's act is a scream. The Rossnow midge jump right out of a page of Gulliver's travels and furnish unbound joy during the whole of their turn. Lou Anger is back again with his intimitable monologue, a dissertation on war that keeps the laughing gas flowing all the while. Ben Beyer and his brother with a cycling act, some new feats, despite the fact that bicycle comes and go without limit. Two unicycle feats were introduced that outrank all others in daring and perfection of execution. The orchestra has a running Sousa number and other splendid selections for the evening, and the kinodrome offers an amusing film depicting the joys and sorrows of a bargain hunter who is encumbered with a baby. The bill throughout is one of the best of the season so far.

COLONIAL—A merry mixup of music and mirth, is the offering presented by Billy Clifford and his company at the Colonial theater. Hanging by a few strands of plot a lot of singing and dancing and specialty work by the chorus is held together for two acts, which are enjoyable as such things go. Clifford is always welcome in Salt Lake, and he is the same debonair "Billy" as of old. His school team session with the audience, in which he endeavors to get his students to join him in some songs is a clever bit of work, and with the assistance of his band, the gallery it "goes" quite well. "The Girl, the Man and the Game" waltz by Billy Clifford and Hazel Swanson is a novel feature and was encored several times.

The story of the place is that Charley Porter, represented by Clifford, has a rich uncle who fell in love with a young lady, but owing to his being called to the Philippines, he delegated his nephew to court her in his absence. The nephew of course falls in love with the girl and disengages his uncle from marrying her by telling him she drinks and is ugly as a mud fence. The uncle tells his nephew if he will get married he will send him $50,000. The nephew sends word that he is married, and gets the money. The uncle unexpectedly returns and the nephew borrows his friend's wife for the occasion. The plot continues with the usual mix-up, consequent upon this deception, and leads to some amusing situations. Adele Archibald as the friend's wife is admirable both in figure and in action; Bud Branson, excellent; Jack Traylor as the rich uncle, is decidedly funny all the way through; Hazel Swanson as Dorothy, the girl's friend, is the best actress in the play. The curtain falls on the last act with a bang.

CHANGE AT THE SHUBERT—The stock company soon to have been opened at the Shubert theater with Mr. Grandstaff from the east and a local company, headed by Willard Mack, has been abandoned for the usual reasons. Manager Florence, however, being convinced there is room for another stock company, presenting melodrama, has engaged the newly organized Frederick Moore company, which will open at the Shubert theater Thursday evening. The bill is entitled "A Fight for Love and Honor" and the players include besides Mrs. Moore, her son, Miss Minnie Thorne of San Francisco, Julia Edwards, Miss Fitzgeralds, Edward Ferris, and Pearl Elster.

MOVING PICTURES—The Luna, Isis and Elite all have up-to-date and attractive shows, being selected especially for the amusement of our fair and conference visitors. * * *

CONCERT TONIGHT—At the theater this evening the concert given by Professor Woodmansee and Miss Florrie Jepperson under the management of Mr. Berkholz will occur. Professor Woodmansee leaves for the coast immediately after tonight's event.

SUIT TO BREAK D. F. WALKER'S WILL

Judge T. D. Lewis Sets October 21 as the Date for Hearing.

MRS. S. A. PAUL'S ALLEGATION

Mrs. Walker Charged With Imposing On Her Husband by Pretending Spiritualistic Communications.

The hearing in the suit brought by Sarah A. Paul to break the will of the late David F. Walker has been set by Judge T. D. Lewis for Oct. 21. The date was fixed, following the denial of a motion to set aside the order requiring the defendant, Althea Walker, to appear before a notary public for examination.

The complaint filed by Mrs. Paul recited that "unconscionable means" had been used to influence David F. Walker in the making of the will. The estate, which is said to consist of stocks, bonds and money, is estimated at $1,800,000, all of which was left to Althea Walker, the second wife. Mrs. Walker, in her complaint, charged that by imposing on her husband by pretending to receive communications from the spirit world, Mrs. Paul is the daughter of Mr. Walker by a former marriage, and in behalf of herself and nine other heirs-at-law the suit was brought. She claims a twelfth interest in the estate.

The complaint was filed in Judge Morse's court and an order was issued requiring the defendant to appear before W. H. Bramel, notary public, for the purpose of examination.

Althea Walker appeared before Judge Lewis this morning and made motion that the order be set aside. This motion was denied and the hearing set for Oct. 21.

Mrs. Paul alleged in the complaint that Althea Walker and her two children are making preparations to leave the state, and this was given as a reason for the request for the issuance of an order compelling the defendant to appear for examination in relation to matters pertaining to the estate. It was also alleged that Mrs. Walker had hidden the stocks, bonds and money, and that Mrs. Paul had no way of finding out the exact amount of the estate, which she estimated at $1,500,000.

CONFERENCE TRAVEL IS UNUSUALLY HEAVY

Railroads Preparing to Handle Greater Traffic Volume Than for Many Years Past.

Local railroad passenger agents are preparing for larger crowds than usual this fair and conference week, the estimate being a travel of 12,000 people, due to returning good times and increased facilities for reaching Salt Lake. The Oregon Short Line is preparing to add several specials to the regular train, while the regular trains are to handle all the extra coaches that traffic calls for. The Rio Grande will put on two specials Saturday and Sunday, and the Ogallala and Denver, Orderville at 8 a.m., and leaving Salt Lake at 5 p.m. Such a number of coaches will be added to the regular trains as may be required. The Salt Lake Route will put on a special train Oct. 4-9, leaving Payson at 7:15 a.m., reaching Salt Lake 9:45 a.m. Returning, the train leaves Salt Lake 11:30 p.m. and puts on extra cars on all lines. Trains 65 and 66, usually running only between Salt Lake and Payson, will, for the week, extend the service to Nephi, leaving Nephi at 6:55 a.m. and arriving Salt Lake at 10:20 a.m. Returning, leave Salt Lake 8 p.m., arriving Nephi at 11:30 p.m. The railroads make one fare for round trip. In the state, the three roads between Ogallala and Salt Lake will easily care for the heavy traffic between those two points. Tickets are good for return until Oct. 12.

The Utah Light & Railway company will double the special service from Murray for conference. As far as travel south of there, one runs each way over the line between Highway 88 and 91, every 15 minutes, which it is believed, will suffice for all demands that may be made. The company put on extra cars Monday for the Fair grounds, giving five minute service from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., with three-minute service after that. At 4:30 p.m., there were enough cars stacked up on the siding at the fair entrance to carry all of the people that were on the grounds at that time.
